Island 23 lyrics

The aircraft carrier island is a command center for operations on board, as well as the ship as a whole. The island is about 46 meters high, but at the base it is only 20 feet (6 meters) wide, so it does not kill too much space on the pilot deck. The top of the island, high above the height of any aircraft on the flight deck, is spread out to provide more space. The upper part of the island is equipped with a number of radar and communication antennas that keep track of nearby ships and aircraft, capture and disturb enemy radar signals, target enemy aircraft and missiles, and capture, among other things, satellite telephone and TELEVISION signals. Below is the primary flight control, or Pri-Fly. In Pri-Fly, an air officer and air officer assistant (known as Air Boss and Mini Boss) manage all aircraft activities on the flight deck and within a 5-mile (8-km) radius. Air Boss and Mini-Boss, both experienced airmen, have a number of computers and communication devices to keep track of everything, but they get a lot of information just by looking out their windows, six floors above the flight deck. As the approaching plane reaches a distance of three-quarters of a mile (1.2 km), landing officers take control to control the landing process. On the same level as the Pri-Fly, the crew and visitors can walk out to a row of vultures, a balcony platform with beautiful views of the entire flight deck. Next floor down is the bridge, the command center of the ship. The commanding officer (captain) usually cons (controls) this ship from a majestic leather chair surrounded by computer screens. The commanding officer directs the helmsman, who actually controls the aircraft carrier, the helmsman who controls the engine room to control the speed of the ship, the helmsman of the patrol, who monitors navigational information, and a number of patrols and support personnel. When the commanding officer is not on the bridge, he puts the deck officer in charge of operations. Interestingly, many aircraft carrier officers are former naval aircraft pilots, so they have personal knowledge of flight deck operations. However, as long as they are in charge of the aircraft carriers, they are forbidden to enter the cockpit to fly the plane themselves. Like the Pri-Fly, the bridge is equipped with a range of high-end monitors, including GPS receivers and many radar screens. But the commanding officer and his team still rely on their own eyes to keep track of the activity around the ship. The level below the bridge is the flagship bridge, the admiral's command center, which is in charge of the entire group of aircraft carriers. Below that are various operations centers, including the control and launch operating room. In this tight, windowless area, the aircraft's handling officer (also called a handler or mangler) and his crew keep track of all aircraft on the flight deck and hangar. Primary handler The tool is the Ouja Board, a two-level transparent plastic table with etched flight deck and hangar contours. Each aircraft is represented by a cut out of the weighing plane on the table. When the actual plane moves from point to point, the handler moves the model plane accordingly. When the plane is out of service because it needs repair, the handler turns it around. Below deck are a number of other control centres, including the Air Traffic Control Centre (CATCC), which occupies several rooms on board the kitchen (immediately below the flight deck). Like the ground air traffic control centre, CATCC is filled with all kinds of radio and radar equipment that controllers use to monitor aircraft in the area (in this case mainly aircraft out of sight of the air boss). CATCC is next to the Combat Center (CDC), the ship's command center. The CDC's primary responsibility is to process incoming information about enemy threats in order to keep the commanding officer fully informed. Skip to the main content It's a modern blend of Hawaiian chalet style with Southeast Asian and Balinese influences, architect Mark de Reus says of the house he and designer Mary Philpotts McGrath built for the family on Hawaii's Big Island. The residence's three pavilions overlook the bay on the north coast of Kona. Coral stone columns support the roof of the residential pavilion, center. The living pavilion opens onto the garden. It's a gathering space that's comfortable and casual and interwoven with vivid colors, says Philpotts McGrath. Lee Jofa monochroof sofa and stripe. McGuire sofas and chairs. In the dining room, Pierce Martin's watered chairs have an informality that deliberately contrasts with the design of the teak table top, de Reus says. Around 1920 tansu was divided into two parts to form a long buffet. Topping these are Balinese temple candles and a water buffalo cow bell. Tapas from New Guinea hang on the wall. Water is spilled from four pots in the reflective pool, providing a gentle sound of water and creating a sense of formalities for the garden courtyard, says de Reus.Monkeypood joinery heats the kitchen. Built-in beds on the veranda of quest cottages offer overflow sleeping, as well as a place for guests to gather, says the designer. Golden-plaster walls, woled-mat ceiling, teak doors and hickory floors serve as a rustic backdrop for furniture. Lanai. Landscaping was designed by Anne Howerton and David Y. Tamura.The hand-carved de Reus doors for the lair were inspired by the doors of the Balinese kingdom of Buleleng and the Palace of Singaraja. Bali's doors are such a great celebration of passage, of moving through a portal with a sense of discovery, he says. Celadon-plaster walls give a sense of calm to the sleeping space of the master suite, says de Reus. Lee Jofa bed skirt fabric. Fabricut pillow and strengthen the fabric.
